Rivera, 256 F.3d 728, 734 (7th Cir. 2001). However, we do not believe that the evidence presented in this case, i.e., the fact that the parties involved the motorcycle, the fact that the defendant was stopped by the police for narcotics in the car, and the fact that the police were on the lookout for the drugs, was sufficient to establish probable cause, even when viewed in the light most favorable to the Government. The fact that both vehicles were stopped on the road, which was a “high risk” area where drug trafficking was common, and that a drug dog “alerted” to the presence of a large amount of cocaine, does not satisfy the standard of probable cause. We also reject the Government’s argument that the defendant’s possession of the drugs and the large amount of currency support probable cause. Although it is true that there was a large amount of currency in the car, the discovery of such money alone is not enough to support probable cause. The cases upon which the Government relies on in its brief, United States v. Pridgen, 16 F.3d 976 (8th Cir. 1994) (holding that the discovery of a large sum of currency in conjunction with reasonable suspicion to search 82157476af
