For those of you who haven't streamed Game of Thrones yet and still want to watch it, but don't want to download the whole season again, we've got good news for you. A torrent file with the entire fifth episode of Season 5 has been uploaded by a torrent site and contains all the episodes so far. This isn't uncommon as it is not unheard-of for Game of Thrones episodes to be leaked before their official release date — this happens often enough that HBO has taken legal action on behalf of themselves and others to stop leaking. The site where we found this torrent is noted as safe by most users and can be considered reliable: its speed is fast and it's easy to use. The file contains all the episodes of Season 5, except the first one, which is already online. The video quality isn't great compared to what HBO usually offers, but it's better than what you are likely seeing by now on your own TV. Torrents are hosted on websites that are usually not under the control of HBO. So they will most likely disappear after a few days after the official release date. But don't worry too much about that as they are pretty hot stuff right now for some fans who have long waited for them or just want to have an extra copy or two before watching the show on TV again. In the meantime, you can check out this unofficial YouTube playlist containing all of the first five episodes: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=FJKWHxIhSAC> And here's the direct link to a torrent file of Episode 5: <http://www.kickasstorrents.com/game-thrones-season-5-episode-5-720p-t7690735.html> Amazon currently has the Season 5 DVD box set for preorder on its website, and it is scheduled to be released sometime on December 16, 2015, which makes it really close to Christmas! Origin has already had the product up for preorder on its website since September but it has been removed from their catalog. The Blu-ray/DVD box set was spotted at Walmart's website earlier this month, but it is currently listed as unavailable. One can hope that this is just a technical glitch and that the item will reappear if it is supposed to be released. There is also a listing for this release on Amazon UK, but there are no preorder links available.

The launch of the fifth season order was heavily speculated by various sources because of various reasons, including HBO itself to be coincidental, but according to HBO's official press release, the company has confirmed an effective date for its new TV season as Fall 2015.
